

The Shap working party on World Religions in Education

Peter Schreiner

How did I come to join the Working Party?

I was asked to join and bring in a European flavor, added to the contributions of the late Herbert Schultze who worked at Comenius-Institut in the field of European activities on World Religions in Education before me. I could contribute with my own view and initiatives of European networks such as the Intereuropean Commission on Church and School where I am a board member and president for many years now.

What are my richest memories of being a Shap Member?

Every meeting I attended was inspiring and fruitful, full of expertise, friendship and a spirit of common understanding of a comprehensive understanding of education where the spiritual and religious dimension plays a crucial role.

What have been my major contributions to the work of Shap?

Not many but bringing in a perspective of other European contexts of education and also information about developments in European institutions such as the Council of Europe.
